Alumni Association makes Decisions

This summer the Epsilon Rho Chapter Alumni Association met in a secret Northern California location.

At this meeting the Executive members, egged on by gawking and sometimes sleepy alumni actually made some decisions and started the wheels in motion to actually do something.

1. The Chapter Alumni Association ("AA") shall support the proposed remodel of the Chapter (see the centerfold for a proposed conceptual design idea)

2. The AA shall support fundraising for the proposed remodel. Several options for financing the remodel are available: mortgage the property for remodel funds, obtain funds via a capital campaign, or a hybrid combination of the two.

3. The AA shall develop a business plan. Brother James "3.2%" Evans and Brother Hal "(Just Back from Iraq) Kilgore" Angus volunteered to head the Business Plan Committee. The committee will work with members of the Active Chapter to produce a business plan for presentation and approval by the ACB. Brothers 3.2 and Kilgore have already met and begun earnest work on the business plan.

4. The AA will investigate the development of a grander Alumni Website.

Brother Dave "(Mai Tai on Me) Hoover" Tilstrom volunteered to undertake this grand feat with assistance from Chris "Yabut" Patterson.

5. The AA will support a scholarship for an Active Chapter member in the amount of $1000.00 based on financial need and being in good standing with the Chapter. Brother Ray "Mumbles" Calande unknowingly volunteered for this committee based on his tenure as AA Treasurer...and it hast to do with money, see how logical that is?

6. The AA is taking nominations for Lifetime Achievement by an

John Kerr Honored for Lifetime Achievement

Poly Royal 2003 was the setting for a new Epsilon Rho award for Lifetime Achievement by an Alumni.

The first brother honored with the Lifetime Achievement Award was John "Si'mon"

Kerr for continuing to pay the debt through his extensive leadership, guidance, sacrifice, and caring for the benefit of brothers and chapter.

In a ceremony at the Carnation Ball it was apparent that Si'mon was deeply touched.

Si'mon was presented with a plaque and the Actives were presented with a plaque to hang at the Chapter.

Make your excuses now, Open House is scheduled!

Cal Poly's Open House, formerly known as Poly Royal has been slated for April 16th, 17th and 18th 2004.

Once again the Chapter and the Alumni Association will be hosting Golf, Barbeque, and the Carnation Ball. Now is the time to schedule a rendezvous with your old chums and pledge brothers.

The University will be hosting events: Friday the 16th, is Admitted Student's Preview Day;

Saturday, April 17, is Club Preview Day and on Sunday, April 18, we are hosting the Annual Golf Tournament. For more information about each day, please visit our website at orientation.calpoly.edu/openhouse.

The school stopped using the name "Poly Royal" 13 years ago, after the big riots. For three years Cal Poly didn't host this event and "Open House" was created in 1993.

Homecoming ACB Meeting

Saturday November 1st at 9:00 AM will begin the ACB Fall Meeting. All Epsilon Rho Alumni are invited to the ACB Meeting.

This year's events start with the Homecoming parade at 10:00 am, Tailgate Bar-b-q and Wine tasting at 1 PM and football game versus Southern Utah at 4 pm.

Special recognition for graduates from the class of 1953 with an All-Alumni Breakfast at Chumash Auditorium.

ACB: Easier than running for Governor of California

What's easier than running for Governor of the Great State of California? Show up to any two regularly scheduled ACB meetings up to one year apart and you are a voting member of the Alumni Control Board!

Really, its that easy, but you do need to have been departed from Cal Poly at least three quarters. (this is where the 'A' comes in ACB...it stands for Alumni) Graduation is not a requirement.

Any Alumni that has an interest in the chapter and is willing to donate time and energy is allowed to speak at ACB meetings but may not vote unless they have attended the pre-requisite meetings..

Any Alumni...is allowed to speak at ACB Meetings...

ACB members must attend meetings to vote, proxy votes are not allowed.

Active Chapter gets Visit from National: Active Report from May

Dear Alumni,

The end of the school year is less than two weeks away. May was a very good month for DSP-Epsilon Rho. We had a visit from a National correspondent, which we haven't had in several years. He met with the entire executive board and talked with many active brothers. He was even an EL Speaker and related some of national's goals and objectives to our chapter. Overall it was a very successful visit and he expressed how impressed he was with our chapter. He went on to say that we have a good chance for the Pyramid of Excellence Award given to the best chapters in the nation at the National Convention in July. We had another EL Speaker during the month of May. We in-

Alumni Association Honor Roll

The following brothers have contributed to the Alumni Association for the past two years.

The support of these brothers has enabled the chapter alumni association to print directories, newsletters, donate an Engineered Leadership board to the active chapter.

This year the alumni association will be offering a scholarship based on financial need to an active member.

Remember: More important than your donation is your updated information. Notwithstanding the foregoing, the legal counsel of the Chapter Alumni Association has advised us to remind you that if you obtain status on the honor roll, you're credit rating will improve, you'll look better, run faster, and you will still have to file your taxes.

With nothing to loose and everything to gain, congratulate these brothers for their intelligence and foresight in supporting the Alumni Association of the Epsilon Rho Chapter.

Alumni Work Weekend Spurns renewed vigor

By Ben "Coco" Parcasio

Last year, while sitting at the Ring-side Restaurant in Portland, OR with Gutter (Don Wyman S'73). Gutter and I were enjoying a great meal at a nationally ranked steak house, we discussed a number of ideas about how much more the Alumni can get involved in the House. This is how the idea of AWOW, Alumni Week of Welcome, came about. The Alumni Sneaks in Lake Tahoe have been a great success to connect the Brothers with their missing Pledge Brothers and Big Brothers, so "Why not?" have another Alumni function to connect the Alumni and their kids with the House, other than Poly Royal. (By the way, Poly Royal is no longer a term used in SLO, but Open House).

Believe it not, Alumni who Pledged between 1970-1978 have college age kids! Currently, we have eight Alumni that have kids in Poly: Stub (daughter), Ozzie (twin boys), Rollo (3 daughters), Mombo (daughter), Squint (Cuffs), Woody (Deuce), Stumbles (Trips), and Ace (son). AWOW was conceived for those Brothers and more, who are consider-

Letter from the Front Line

Below in unedited form is an e-mail letter from Epsilon Rho Alumni Major Hal "Kilgore" Angus USMC. Hal is a member of the fabled Fall 1981 Class that brought a new standard to Epsilon Rho.

Hal spent a good deal of time overseas, including Christmas, away from his two boys Dane and Brock.

As any veteran of the service can attest, you gain a newfound fondness for beautiful, clean, and green United States of America.

Howdy everyone!

It's been awhile since my last e-mail. I hope y'all are doing well. I'm scheduled to return home in about a month. YEAHHH!!! I've been staying busy coordinating the repair/reconstruction of damaged bridges and collecting/tracking the locations, marking and destruction of Iraqi minefields as well as Iraqi/U.S. unexploded ordnance (UXO). I'm also the IMEF Liaison to the U.S. State Department Quick Reaction De-mining Force and the Office of Reconstruction and Humanitarian Assistance (ORHA) humanitarian de-mining operations. We have a De-mining Team from Mozambique clearing several minefields in our area right now. The weather is hot over here, and I MEAN HOT!!! It's averaged over 110 for the past several weeks and it doesn't cool down much at nights. I arose early this morning because I got tired of sweating inside my two man tent. Thus, I have a little free time and I thought I'd share some of my experience and observations that I've recorded during the war. I hope this provides everyone a little insight to what it was like for some of us as we served over here. Just remember, I've been a higher headquarters staff pogue the entire time, so there won't be anything too terribly exciting.

Greetings from the "Cradle of Western Civilization", ancient land of Mesopotamia, Hamurabi, City of Ur, Tower of Babel, Hanging Gardens of Babylon and birthplace of Abraham. As I write this, the war against the regime of Saddam Hussein has ended and the hard work of rebuilding the country of Iraq has just begun. These are my recollections of some of the more personally memorable events over the past 60 days.

The Missile

It is strange, waking up knowing that any day now the war will start. My schedule is such that I'm up most of the night putting together the Engineer Situation Report that has to be submitted to our higher headquarters by 0300 in the morning. I hit the rack (go to bed) around 0400 and get up about 0800. The war was planned to begin the next evening with a barrage of hundreds to thousands of missiles and bombs, "Shock and Awe" was the media tag that had been given to the initial Air Campaign; it would be immediately followed by the beginning of the ground war. Instead, it starts that night with a hard intelligence collection on Saddam's location and the National Command Authorities' decision to decapitate" the Iraqi leadership. Approximately 60 precision guided missiles and bombs are launched from various locations and hit their mark.... but did we get Saddam?" No one knows for sure and only time will tell. As I see the events unfold on CNN, it hits me... the war has begun. I ask myself, "Will the ground attack begin now as I glance up towards the direction of the explosion and see a large mushroom shaped cloud rising from just outside of camp, but no flames. My heart stops. "That one was close...could it be chemical?...I'm alert, but calm as I realize I have confidence in my equipment, my training and my faith in our LORD."

The bunkers are prefabricated concrete enclosures and not underground. For the weeks preceding the war we have practiced dozens of times. These drills have become annoying and irritating because they are rarely scheduled, usually occurring during a meal or a meeting. Today, I can kiss whoever made us practice. There is no chaos in the bunker, just actions practiced dozens of times. I move towards the middle to make sure as many people as possible can get in.

I sit on an expedient seat made of two by fours and wait to see what will happen next.

There is no immediate siren, an explosion doesn't need further introduction.

The siren finally sounds a few minutes after we are in the bunkers. A few nervous laughs echo about. I am surprised that our bunker is not full. I gaze around at the many faces across from me. They are all covered by gas masks, but some clearly show their discomfort, anxiety and fear, while others are calm, and thoughtful. You can see the training kicking in and the struggle between a desire to go out and do something and the desire to remain safe within the bunker. I am caught up in the struggle myself, temporarily controlling my instinct to get out of the bunker and take action.

I close my eyes and try to regulate my breathing. I am praying and listening for the sounds of more missiles, or some indication of what has happened. Eventually, my breathing and heart rate slow to near normal and I relax. My need to do something wins out over remaining safely within the bunker and I venture outside. Marines are taking up positions around the I MEF Combat Operations Center (COC), a corrugated metal warehouse that we have been using as the I MEF Command Center for the past four months.

...twice he had run into the frame of the tent...

I take up a position along the side of the bunker that gives me a good view of one of the guard towers and approaches to the COC. The waiting is driving me crazy, but that is all I can do right now. As I stand there I get mad all over again. We have given Hussein a chance to make a statement and he came within a couple of hundred yards of killing a good chunk of the I MEF staff. It is more than an hour before the "All Clear" is given. Later, Captain Ron Heflin, our Explosive Ordnance Disposal (EOD) officer tells us it was a Chinese Seersucker anti-ship missile, modified for use on land and packing a whopping 1,300lbs of explosives. The Patriots were useless because it flew under the radar, past everyone, at 300-400 feet off the ground.

With the "All Clear" I head back to the tent, my face red from the suction of the mask and the sweat. Upon reuniting with my fellow Marines there are numerous exclamations best left un-described for young readers. Lieutenant Commander Vince Martinez, a Navy EOD is laughing as he tells Lieutenant Colonel Chris Lozano, our Engineer Information Officer, "Sir, I was a second team All-American defensive back at Syracuse and I never ran as fast as you did!" He then goes on to tell us that he had been in such a hurry that not once, but twice he had run into the frame of the tent and fallen down before he managed to get out. We all laughed. We had just received a very real wake up call and if it hadn't felt like we were at war prior to this missile attack then there was no doubt now. That day we will head to the bunkers six heart-pumping times. I finally hit the rack about 2100 that night after being up for over 36 hours. During the four hours I attempted to get some sleep I was up and off to the bunkers six more times. Each time the night resonated with the sound of Patriot missiles firing into the sky and the nerve-wracking wait for incoming. Thankfully, there were no more. We had fired our first shots and Saddam Hussein had given us his answer "he intends to fight."

This is the first of several shorts that I'll pass along over the next several weeks. I hope everyone had a "memorable" Memorial Day Weekend.

Thank you for the support and the encouraging emails. Take care and I look forward to seeing many of you soon.

Semper Fidelis,
Hal

Doldrums: Alumni Assn Short on Paid Membership

The Chapter Alumni Association has received less than 70% of the support it received last year.

Your contribution of $20 allows for these clever, informative, and valuable newsletters and supports the chapter with gifts and grants that go to the betterment of the brotherhood.

Volunteers are asked to locate, contact, and solicit dues from lost brothers listed in this newsletter.

Are you reading this and have not paid dues? Give so that others can have the enriching experience you had at San Luis Obispo.

vited the recent recipient of the lifetime achievement award for contribution to Epsilon Rho, John Kerr. John was a member of the spring 1958 class. He had dinner with us and then gave a fantastic speech. His speech inspired us, made us laugh and challenged us to keep the house running on all cylinders. At the conclusion of his speech he received a standing ovation.

In the athletic department we have also faired well. We took second place in Greek Week Soccer and third place in IFC Soccer. In the Alpha Phi Basketball tournament our house really stepped up. We started off by knocking off the #1 seed and moving on to the elite 8. We ended up taking fourth place, a definite improvement over the last couple of years. Two weeks ago we held our annual parents weekend. There was wine tasting, golf, a catered dinner and a BBQ for our parents. We had a good turnout and many parents enjoyed meeting our "family" away from home.

Two weeks ago we had our year end party Sailors Ball. Not only did we have a good time but we also gave back to the community by making the price of admission two cans of food. We ended up with over 500 cans and donated them to a local homeless shelter.

alumni. Several nominations were taken and some wonderful things were said about a great many brothers. The following brothers were nominated: Rick "Sumo" Kretzinger, Chris "Yabut" Patterson, Rick, "Bozo" Rengel, Jim "Lurch" Larson, Bill "Fubar" Bradly, and Joel "Mole III" Setaro.

To be further considered, nominating brothers must submit a written declaration of their nomination giving a detailed description of why the nominated brother is deserving of the recognition of a Lifetime Achievement Award.

Nominations should be sent to Jonathan Monfort (see membership order form for address or email) whereupon the AA will make a decision. The Lifetime Achievement award is presented as warranted and is not necessarily an annual award.

The final decision made was to adjourn and sample some of the local culture, flora and fauna, and epicurean and mixological delights.

ing Poly as a school for their kids. The fact is, Poly is one of the best and toughest school to get into in the country. The cost of sending our kids to State colleges is nearly to $15-20,000 per year. The House can solve these immediate problems, if we present it as an option.

The Alumni can solve a number of things in AWOW. We can help guide the House to a major cleaning after a typical Summer trashing and prepare for a successful WOW (Week of Welcome) and RUSH Week. This is a great opportunity to present the House at its best, as a "social option" for Alumni kids and their friends. Only positive things can come out this idea, and here's what happened last weekend.

"AWOW went great! Woody, Bozo, Lego, and I worked Saturday from 10 to 12 Noon. The bulk of the work was getting rid of the garbage around the perimeter of the building and hallways. Bozo brought his truck and trailer, and made three trips to the dump with a lot of ole couches, refrigerators, engine block, etc.

270 Missing Brothers: No Address or Dues!

Do you recognize some names on this list? Help us out, just take a few minutes to locate one, two, or three brothers... use Yahoo or another search engine, call information, or hire a private detective!

Its fun, and you may just have a good laugh when you surprise one of these lost souls.

On top of all that stuff, like an olive in an old martini, you have the satisfaction of helping the Chapter Alumni Association build a directory that is complete and without parallel in the known universe.

The new directory will be coming out soon, so get your updates in by October 31st... yep that's right, Halloween, the kids are out and you system is gummed up with candy... make your self feel good: find a lost brother.

Alumni Work it

It's amazing how a few garbage runs can make the difference in the House. We trimmed up the yard and hosed down the BBQ area. Rambo and company took a tooth brush to the kitchen, especially the back wall of the oven, and floor.

All in all, about 30 Brothers showed up for the work day. I told them that work days are mandatory, and Housing needs to post a list of chores, doable within the two hours, on the slider for Brothers to check out in advance. Simply to inventory the workers that day and assign detail to those who didn't show.

The President and his Exec. led the way. Thunder was reinstated as Housing Manager, and has the full support of Exec. Sonar (Commissary) and I put together a spaghetti luncheon for the boys. I brought sauce for about 25+. Rush Week started that night, so we left the House in good shape.

If we came in three weeks ago, we would have hauled off 10 truck loads... and it would have been ugly! Our emotions would have taken over!!! Before WOW week maybe. Last weekend, definitely! Rush week is important.

Again, many thanks to Woody, Lego, and Bozo for volunteering their Saturday to make this happen.
